Hall and Dole, two of the trastees: Jindge Judd, one of the testamentary advisors of the trastees: Mr. Lishman, architect, and several ladies. The Home is to consist of a two-story building in the certire, containing a purior, dimingroom, ofice, dispensary, and up stars: rooms for the supermembert. Over the entrance will be a tower about sixty feet high somewhat after a Florentine campanile in style. On each side of the central part is a wing of one story, terminating in a large ward, with roof projecting considerably above the roof of the rost of the wing. There are to be wrantidate in front and at the back; while the wards will have roomy balconies. The whole length of the building will be about 276 feet. It is to be built of stone, with trimmings of artificial store; trucks to be of state. The site is below the foot-built from Mount Tantalius, nearly opposite to the new cometery. The Home when finished will accommodate over forty beneficiaries. The site of the Lanalilo Home for Infirm and has reached. It is as well the frontier point, the advanced post standing abreast of Asiatric civilization. Here the tidal waves of vast and different masses of human life are meeting without obstruction. Starting from this point, His Majesty will follow a lime of travel, not at first through those countries where the elder races are found. He will look upon that Japanese race, which stood sullenly so long before European civilization, and refused its offers, but which, suddenly, threw open and back its own doors, thrust out its arms and began taking to itself the best which that European civilization could give. He will look upon that Ohinese race, which was old when the powerful nations of the earth were young; that nation which is to-day making prospectly possible in these islands, by its contribution of labor. He will see that East Indian race, so mysterious in its habits of life and thought, from which it may be, in the course of events, there shall be drawn a new source of life for this kingdom, and beyond, he will see those great and individualized races which bold the earth from the boundaries of Asia westward to the limit of this kingdom, but from this long turvel, he will acquire large information, by observation and intercourse. It will serve him well hereafter. One might perhaps think that in these quiet Islands in the summer seas, there would be none of the problems which agitate men. Yet, in truth, there is nawhere to-day, a country which presents such an army of formidable questions. I am sure you will, appreciate the serious difficulties which fits Majesty's Ministers must meet at all times, in every way, in every form. We are not alone in this, for we, in a smaller way, share with those who govern other countries, in the perplexities of statesmanship. For where is there a civilized race, to-day, which is not in a measure gropping in the dark, in the anxions search for answers to questions which imperatively demand answer? Permit me to be speak for His Majesty's Ministers, during his absence fro Ben Advertisements.
